INFORMATION

15 Cr.
15 CRIM 641

COUNT ONE

(Exceeding Authorized Access to a Computer)

The United States Attorney charges:

Background

1. At all times relevant to this Information, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, was employed in the private wealth management division of a multinational bank and financial services company headquartered in Manhattan (the "Bank"). At all relevant times, MARSH was employed in the Bank's Manhattan office, initially as a Customer Service Associate ("CSA") and then as a Financial Advisor ("FA"). In that capacity, MARSH worked as part of a group of CSAs and FAs (the "Group") that provided financial and investment services to particular private wealth management clients of the Bank. At all relevant times, other similarly structured groups within the private wealth management division provided the same services to the Bank's other private wealth management clients (together with the Group's clients, the "Clients").

2. At all times relevant to this Information, the Bank maintained certain computer systems to manage confidential account information (the "Computer Systems") regarding the Clients. The Bank's Computer Systems contained, among other things, the Clients' names, addresses, and other personal information. One of the Bank's Computer Systems ("System-1") contained, among other things, details of the Clients' fixed income holdings. Another of the Bank's Computer Systems ("System-2") contained information reflecting, among other things, the total value of, and the amount of revenue generated by, the Clients' investment accounts at the Bank.

3. Like other Bank FAs and CSAs, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, was authorized to access the Client information maintained in the Bank's Computer Systems only with respect to Clients of his own Group. At all relevant times, except for certain limited circumstances not relevant to this Information, MARSH, like other Bank FAs and CSAs, was prohibited from accessing information in the Bank's Computer Systems regarding Clients not serviced by his Group. Consistent with the limited authorization given to FAs and CSAs to access the Computer Systems, at all relevant times, the Bank required FAs and CSAs to input certain identification information (the "Identification Numbers") into those systems before Client information in the systems could be accessed. In particular, to access Client information, each user was required to input unique Identification Numbers that identified the particular user, as well as the user's particular branch office and group. After inputting the Identification Numbers, the user was able to access only Client information concerning Clients within the user's own group.

Marsh Knowingly Obtained Confidential Client Information Without Permission or Authority

4. From in or about June 2011 through in or about December 2014, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, used the Bank's Computer Systems to access, without permission or authority, confidential information about certain Clients serviced by FAs and CSAs outside of his Group. In order to obtain this unauthorized access to confidential Client information, MARSH used, without permission or authority, the Identification Numbers of other Bank branches, groups, and FAs in the Bank's Computer Systems.

5. From in or about June 2011 through in or about December 2014, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, conducted approximately 4,000 unauthorized searches of confidential Client information in System-1. From on or about January 1, 2014 through on or about December 31, 2014, MARSH conducted approximately 1,952 unauthorized searches of confidential Client information in System-2. In total, without permission or authority, MARSH obtained confidential information, including names, addresses, telephone numbers, account numbers, fixed-income investment information, and account values, of approximately 730,000 Client Bank accounts (the "Confidential Client Information"). Over a series of dates from in or about June 2011 through in or about December 2014, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, uploaded the Confidential Client Information from the Bank to a personal server at his home in New Jersey.

6. From at least in or about June 2011 through in or about December 2014, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, knowingly accessed, without permission or authority, the Bank's Confidential Client Information to use for his personal advantage as a private wealth management advisor at the Bank. In addition, from at least in or about October 2013 through in or about December 2014, MARSH was engaged in discussions regarding potential employment with two other financial institutions that are competitors of the Bank.

Statutory Allegations

7. From in or about June 2011 through in or about December 2014, in the Southern District of New York and elsewhere, GALEN MARSH, the defendant, intentionally exceeded his authorized access to a computer and thereby obtained information contained in a financial record of a financial institution, the value of which information exceeded $5,000, to wit, MARSH exceeded his authorized access to the Bank's Computer Systems and thereby obtained Confidential Client Information, the value of which exceeded $5,000.
